Today gives us the first touch of October weather-and October almost gons. So unseasonable has been the weather that the demand for fail goods has been materially interfered with. So much so in Coats and Cloaks that we find ourselves sightly overstocked in several lines of very desirable styles.

To quicken their sale we have concluded to offer them tomorrow at the following greatly reduced prices.

Ladies' Black Diagonal Camel's Hair Reefers, rolling collar, ailk frogs. Beduced from $7.50 to $6.48 each.

Three styles in Ladies' Coats reduced from $9.48 to $8.48-a dollar your way.

One is a Diagonal and the other a Plain Cheviot, both have silk from and roll-ing collar. The third is a Reefer, with to the front seam. All three are excel-lent styles and well worth their regular price. Tomorrow, $8.48 instead of $9.48. Ladies' Diagonal Tweed Walking Coats, tight fitting, high shoulders, Tans and Grays. Reduced from $9.98

In his very discursive and, in places, eloquent address at Atlanta on Henry Grady, the editor, Gov. Hill uttered some thoughts that will elicit comment and challenge. He recognizes the fact that within the life-time of still active men the daily press seems to have created a new era and to be remolding our social and political character into its own likeness. This is high praise even for a politician to pay the press. But in the next breath he denies even to the best of American journals them eed of praise which he ungrudgingly accords to one London paper, the Times, for presenting to its readers both sides parliamentary and political debate with equal fullness and perfect fairness. Ho even slaps the American press in the face by saying that the London Times' reports of political debates are incomparably superior in every respect to the corresponding reports of any American journal. This is a sweeping statement. It is doubtless true that the leading English newspapers pay great attention to political news and that some of them are very fair in their reports of political proceedings, but in any comparison between English and American newspapers reference should not be omitted to the immense superiority of the latter as general newsgatherers in extent of field covered, in enterprise in opening new fields, and in rapidity of collection and publication. Viewed merely as newsgatherers the American newspapers surpass any others in the world. Even in the political field, which is cultivated by some English newspapers at the expense of all other news, a few of our great dailies are probably in position to stand comparison with the English in fullness of political reports and there are a number, increasing every year, which strive to keep editorial tendencies from affecting the news columns, and to report with fairness, confining partisan distortion of facts to the editorial page. And there are some, like THE Stan, which endeavor to be fair in all parts of the paper. Among Washington daily publications there is perhaps none except the Congressional Record to contend or to wish to contend with the London Times in fullness of political reports at the expense of other local and world's news, but THE STAR does not admit that the Tomes or any other paper in the world

Massachusetts politics may not be so im portant to the republicans as Ohio politics or to the democrats as New York politics, but somehow there is more life and as much uncertainty in the bay state campaign as in either of the other states. It is due to the peculiar condition of New England political thought at the present time as well as to the strong in dividuality of the democratic leader, perhaps more to the former than to the latter cause. If Gov. Russell were not, however, a man of great force the democratic prospect in that quarter would not be so good as it is. New England looks and has always looked to Massachusetts for leadership. Massachusetts keeps the closest watch over her own interests of any state of the Union. A sensitive and keenly emotional people on their intellectual side, the people of Massachusetts note in advance the signs of public change, both in New England and in the rest of the Union, and when the time has become ripe for action they are never caught unready. It was so in conceiving and making possible independence; it was again true in the matter of protecting American industry, although her large importing interests operated to restrain her for a time, and it was this fact which gave Pennsylvania the commanding position she has always held on this question; and in those great moral reforms which have distinguished the nineteentl century, abolition, the secret ballot and the like, Massachusetts has led the vanguard. The tendency of the state is to what is called tariff reform, or so much of it as admits of the free importation of such raw materials as her manufactures require. The approaching election will hardly be decisive of her final attitude on this question, in whatever way it may go.

surpasses it in the quality of fairness.

Dom Pedro in exile shows the scholarly and studious mental tendency which, while it elevates him in esteem, makes it easy to understand why he did not display the quick, active spirit needful to keep the reins of government well in hand. His principal diversion in his exile now is a continuation of his study of Hebrew poetry. A man could scarcely be expected to devote himself to such profound literary study and at the same time keep a volatile South American people under his control. Nor was Dom Pedro so greatly to be blamed if he found more to interest him in the poetry of the ancient Hebrews than he did in the manifestoes of the modern Brazilians. Mr. Thomas G. The magnificent gift of Mr. Hodgkins induces the belief that others of the broad minded among America's rich men will bestow money where it will serve public interests and civilization through the remote future.

The English idea of introducing music into Orris. the hospitals as a soothing influence and hence Orris. as a portion of the treatment may give rise to a new school. Certain it is that some of the styles of composition now accepted by the public-Wagner's, for instance-would be utterly out of place in such a field. It is quite possible that we will have a class of composers who devote themselves to finding effects that will exercise the best influence on the invalid. England's apparent alarm concerning the

Some one contemplates publishing the poems that Ruskin wrote when he was seven years old This is almost as unfair as to print the poems that Tennyson writes now.

There is little doubt now that the Chinese have gone into training for a future belligerent condition. They have accepted foot bull as a popular game. Jay Gould says proudly that he never took a
